This article looks at the Fuchs P22 plumbing system that was introduced in the early 2000's. The Fuchs P22 system consists of an extensive range of connecting pipes and fittings and features a number of unique and useful features. It can be a very effective and reliable system, particularly as a property owner, as it offers a comprehensive and effective means of restoring plumbing leaks and blockages. The primary function of the Fuchs P22 is to provide a channel for transporting water from the main, such as from a dam or reservoir, to an outlet, such as a shower. Once this channel has been established, water is transferred from the main through the system to the outflow system. The pumps are driven by pressure and the lines can be built up gradually to deliver a shower or a flood to a specified area
